HIGH-TECH VISION

By Emma Britton

Innovative plans to transform East London into 'one of the world's great technology centres' have been unveiled.

In a major boost for the Council's work to transform the 2012 Press and Broadcast Centres in Hackney Wick into a creative hub, the Government announced plans that support this vision.

Following years of campaigning by the Council to develop a new centre for the digital and creative industries in the borough, the Government indicated the media centres would be the prime site for such investment.

The success of cutting edge businesses already thriving in Hackney, which have led to the area around Old Street being dubbed 'Silicon Roundabout', has created the ideal environment to attract big names including Google, Facebook, and Vodafone.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "Hackney is already the creative heart of London, with one third of our businesses working in those industries. This announcement reaffirms our aims for the Press and Broadcast Centres and certainly endorses our long-held vision that the centres can be a catalyst for wider investment into the borough and East London, with the potential to create thousands of new jobs.

"We will continue our work with partners including the Olympic Park Legacy Company to ensure we can secure this vital employment legacy from the 2012 Games."

Speaking during a visit to the borough earlier this month, Prime Minister David Cameron said the Government wanted to harness the creativity of Shoreditch and the possibilities of the Olympic Park to help make East London 'one of the world's great technology centres'.

He added: "There are now over 100 high-tech companies in the area. Combine that with the possibilities of the Olympic Park. Just a few Tube stops away, there's the potential for nearly one million square feet of flexible office and research space which technology companies could expand into."

The Press and Broadcast Centres will be home to 20,000 media during the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, reporting to a global audience of around four billion. The 900,000 square feet of flexible space will remain after the Games and is designated for employment.

THE Council has teamed up with The Dogs Trust to offer free chipping worth £25 in a bid to reduce the number of strays picked up in the borough.

The procedure involves inserting a rice grain-sized microchip under a dog's skin. The chips can be read through a scanner and tallied with owner records used by the Council's Animal Warden Service.

The Council has a legal responsibility to pick up stray dogs and provide kennelling for up to a week. Of the 145 strays picked up since April, only 21 were chipped. It is hoped chipping will help the service return more lost dogs to their owners, reducing the pressure on local animal services.

Cllr Sophie Linden, Cabinet Member for Crime, Sustainability and Customer Services, said: "The Council is embarking on this micro-chipping programme in order to encourage responsible dog ownership, and to reduce the number of stray dogs picked up in the borough. Losing a pet can cause distress to both the owner and to the animal, but stray animals also put pressure on local services, and can be dangerous if left to roam."

The first event was set to take place on 12 November in Clissold Park. Two other events will be held on 27 November, 11am-4pm, at Butterfield Green, N16, and 4 December, 11am-4pm, at Well Street Common, E9. Dogs Trust staff will be on hand to offer low-cost and free neutering vouchers; free basic dog training; and general advice on ownership. More events are planned for 2011.

Micro-chipping is just one of a number of ways in which the Council aims to promote responsible dog ownership in the coming months.

Recognition for Eastern Curve

THE Barn and Eco Garden in Dalston has been short listed in this year's London Planning Awards. Over the last two years the garden – formerly derelict and overgrown – has evolved to include a barn. Built using recycled materials such as wood taken from railways, it also features a rainwater collection system.

The Barn and Eco Garden is open from 11am-3pm, Tues to Thurs; and 11am-4pm at weekends

Hackney Today is printed on 100 per cent recycled paper.

Former Mayoress of Hackney, Emma Dunning, with Neil Seon from Hackney Homes

By
Sarah Menz

RESIDENTS are being reminded that help is available to ensure they keep warm and safe this winter.

The Council has pooled together tips and advice for older people, as well as those who want to be more energy efficient around the home and save money.

During the cold winter months energy costs go up as the temperature goes down, and elderly and vulnerable people are less likely to be able to get out and about.

To combat this, Hackney Homes staff have begun knocking on hundreds of doors in the borough to check residents are safe and well. Every year, staff from neighbourhood offices and estate cleaners check to make sure residents are ok and identify any support they may need.

Hackney Homes staff – who manage the borough's

Council housing – recently called on Emma Dunning, aged 102. They were able to arrange a home visit from her GP so that she didn't need to travel to the surgery, and made plans to visit her on a fortnightly basis.

Mrs Dunning was born in Hackney and has lived here all her life. Her husband, Jack Dunning, was Mayor of Hackney in 1966/7. She said: "I am so pleased that Hackney Homes come to check how I am. It is good to see a friendly face at the door and to chat about anything that I may need."

Hackney Homes staff all carry ID cards and will produce them for inspection. If you have any doubts, don't let them in. Call the Hackney Homes contact centre (details above, left) to verify a caller's identity.

Message from the Mayor

Fair funding

In my last message, I explained my great concern about the impact the Government cuts could have on Hackney.

Over the past two weeks, I've been using every opportunity I can to urge the Government first and foremost to provide further grant funding to boroughs such as Hackney, or at the very least reconsider how they phase the cuts so that the Council, and other councils across London, can better manage their impact and protect the vital services we know our residents rely on.

When the Chancellor announced the cuts as part of the Comprehensive Spending Review last month, councils were told their funding would be reduced by an average of seven per cent each year for the next four years.

However, as the details behind the announcement became clearer, it appeared the cuts to council grants will not be spread evenly, but that the majority will be made in the first year. This could mean a reduction in funding to Hackney of more than £50million next year.

The Council had been planning to make savings of £26million, which would have been enough to cover the grant cut of seven per cent originally announced. This would have been difficult, but the Council would have been able to protect front-line services from the effects of this first year's grant reductions.

The financial situation is made worse in areas such as Hackney as we are losing additional grants we had previously been given to tackle specific problems of economic and social inequality.

On behalf of residents, I have spoken in person to the Secretary of State for local government - Eric Pickles - and I have also written several letters to get clarification on the level of cuts, and I am awaiting a response.

I have also been urging the Government to rethink the cuts to housing benefit which could lead to many large families having to move out of central London boroughs such as Hackney, as they will no longer be able to afford their rent.

The impact of these cuts could result in a large numbers of our residents being placed under huge financial pressure to move to outer London or beyond in search of cheaper accommodation. The consequences wouldn't end there – many children could be uprooted from their schools, and their parents possibly have to quit their jobs and look for work elsewhere if their new home is too far away to travel to their existing employment.

I will continue to lobby Government and work with colleagues in other authorities to ensure the most deprived areas of London receive a fair settlement. Most of all, I will be continuing to work to minimise the impact of these Government grant cuts on our residents, and the protection of Hackney's vital frontline services will always remain the Council's absolute priority.

Jules Pipe, elected Mayor of Hackney

OLDER residents got physical when they tried out a recently opened outdoor multi-sports gym on Mabley Green.

The adiZone is free to use and open all year round. The project was designed and developed by sportswear company adidas and boasts facilities inspired by Olympic and Paralympic sports. It incorporates basketball, football and tennis areas, as well as an outdoor gym.

The gathering was part of preparations for the New Age Games, which launch on 18 November at Kings Hall Leisure Centre, E5.

The Council-run games, which will take place throughout next year, are open to all residents aged 50-plus. The aim is to create chances for older people to try out new sports and leisure activities; promote health and well-being; and support independent living. Participants can also sign up for free activities throughout the year.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "This is a great opportunity for older people to keep fit, try different sporting and leisure activities and meet new friends."

Resident Rosalyn Allen, 62, said: "I think it's good to encourage people to exercise because it keeps you fit and healthy and gets you out of the house. I would encourage other older people to exercise."

KwasiAppea-Mensa, 76, added: "Exercise helps the joints and I'm hoping that I can find other ways to improve my health at the New Age Games."

Colin Joseph

A FARM shop with a rooftop chicken coop has been offering residents a chance to try urban agriculture in Dalston.

Supported by the Council, FARM:shop – the brainchild of eco-designers Something & Son – is based at 20 Dalston Lane, E8. It offers fresh produce grown in the shop itself, or directly traceable to a farm, and has a community café, and affordable events and work space.

The shop also boasts miniature fish farms and an indoor allotment.

Volunteers have been working every weekend since July to get FARM:shop off the ground, and there are ongoing volunteering opportunities and fortnightly events for people to get involved in.

The shop opened its doors on 5 November, and is currently open Friday to Sunday, from 11am-6pm. It is part of the Council's 'Art in Empty Spaces' initiative – funded through a Government grant – to transform empty properties into something meaningful for residents and visitors.

Other projects include 'Posted', an art project in a decommissioned Post Office; and 'Banner Repeater', a gallery and reading room on Hackney Downs station.

On course for a new career

A GROUP of future builders have celebrated completing a free construction course at Woodberry Down.

For four weeks, the 16 to 25-year-old trainees practised on empty properties to improve their plumbing, tiling, carpentry, painting and decorating skills, and got health and safety tips from qualified professionals. A celebration took place on 4 November. The 'Built 2 Work' scheme was funded by Team Hackney Community Grants, administered by HCVS on behalf of Team Hackney, and delivered by the Construction Youth

£220K for Caribbean elders

AN outreach project aimed at older Caribbean people has secured close to a quarter of a million pounds from the Big Lottery Fund.

Hackney Caribbean Elderly Association (HCEA) picked up the £220,770 award. It is also partly funded by the Council. The award will be used to support the organisation's work for the next five years.

Its Advocacy and Outreach for Caribbean Elders scheme aims to help those facing well being, economic and social issues – such as disability, low income and isolation – access mainstream services.

The project's work features regular visits to churches, day services, communities groups and shelters

White Ribbon Day

SERVICES to support victims of domestic violence are being highlighted for White Ribbon Day.

The 25 November marks the International Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women, and the Council is showing its support by offering an information stall at Hackney Central Library, E8, from 10am to 4pm.

Members of the Council's Domestic Violence Team will offer information about the help available to vulnerable people living in fear of someone in their home.

White ribbons will also be given out as a symbol of taking a stand against violent behaviour. Hackney can provide confidential advice, safety measures and counselling in partnership with many voluntary support groups.

The Council has a confidential free helpline: 0800 056 0905; full list of services at: www.hackney.gov.uk/safer-communities-domestic-violence-support

90 seconds to film success

FILM London has teamed up with the Council to launch a grassroots short film competition.

The contest invites filmmakers to submit 90-second shorts on the theme of 'Capital Tales'. The winning filmmaker gets £500, plus entry into the annual Film London Best of Borough Awards at Bafta in 2011. As well as the cash prize, Film London will be running a free film-making workshop for Hackney residents. Deadline for entries is 21 March 2011. The main contact for the film must be a Hackney resident. By
James Willsher

DALSTON'S Arcola Theatre is asking for the support of residents and businesses after securing new premises from the Council.

The theatre's current base in Arcola Street, E8, is due to be redeveloped by the building's owner, and the company has launched a fund-raising appeal to enable it to move and re-open in the New Year.

After an approach by the Arcola's management, an alternative location was identified in a Council owned building in nearby Ashwin Street.

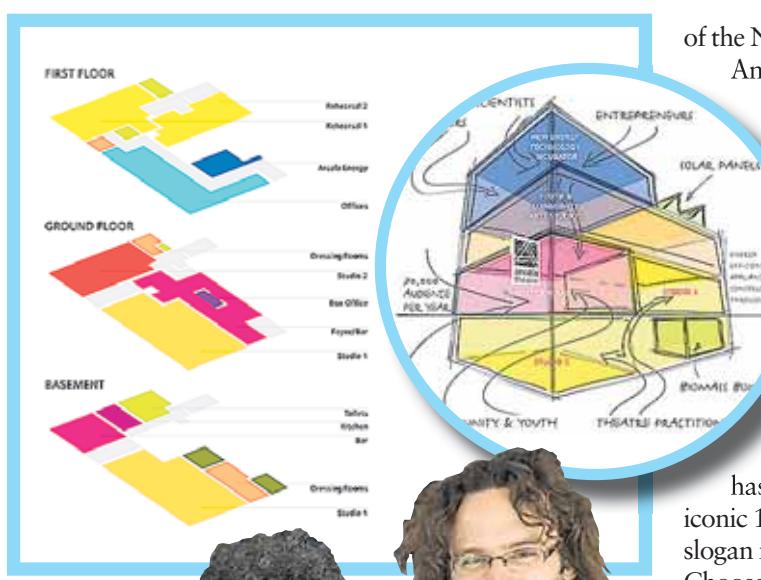

A £150,000 public fund-raising target has been set to enable the first phase of the million pound project to begin – construction of a main 200-seat theatre, 100-seat studio-theatre and two new spaces for Arcola's youth and community programme work.

The new premises are set to feature a range of eco-measures, including low-energy and natural lighting, on-site renewable power, and a partnership programme with eco-technology companies.

Mehmet Ergen, Arcola founder and Artistic Director, said: "After 10 years in Dalston we're thrilled to be moving to this beautiful new building, as part of the emerging cultural quarter around Dalston Junction, and we invite everyone to come to our first show in our new home."

To support the fund-raising, Angel of the North sculptor, Antony Gormley, has donated an artwork that will be printed onto T-shirts and given to the first 200 people to donate £500 or more to the appeal.

Fashion designer Katharine Hamnett has also revived her iconic 1980s 'Choose Life' slogan for the theatre on Choose Arcola T-shirts, which are now available from the box office.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "The Arcola Theatre makes an extraordinary cultural contribution to Dalston and to all those who live and work there.

"The theatre's new plans not only secure the Arcola's future, but also secure a future for the great tradition of the performing arts in Dalston."

For donations of £50 or more people will be recognised with their name painted on a 'supporter wall' in the new building.

The Arcola is also asking for volunteers to get in touch if they are willing to spare some time to help get the new venue ready.

Comedian Kat B compered the 3 November event, with awards presented by 2008 Olympic bronze medal-winning hurdler, Natasha Danvers, and Hackney's Paralympic swimmer, Dervis Konuralp.

Now in its fifth year, the awards recognise the achievements of young people who have participated at local, county or national level over the past 12 months, including at the London Youth Games. There were also awards for volunteering, services to sport, and coach of the year. Two athletes were singled out as sports people of the year. In the under-13s category, it was rising tennis star Lucas Taylor, who plays for Hackney City Tennis Club and is British number-one in his age group.

Lucas, who is currently competing in Russia, said: "The award came as a great surprise and it's very exciting – thanks to everyone."

The under-21 winner was cyclist Alex Peters. A member of the borough's winning London Youth Games cycling team, he is ranked second in the country for road biking and fourth in mountain biking in his age group.

The under-18 team award was won by Hackney Community College boys basketball team. Manager Paul Lazarus said: “The awards are a highlight of the year, where local sporting success in the widest sense is celebrated. This event not only recognises achievement, it serves to motivate and inspire the next set of achievers.”

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, presented the Mayor's award for services to sport. He said: “We have seen many individuals and teams recognised for their dedication and commitment to sport in the borough. I'd like to add my congratulations to the winners and to those on the short list and, equally importantly, my thanks to the families, friends and coaches whose support makes this success possible.”

During the event, grants were given out to recipients of Hackney's Youth Sports Fund, which provides financial support for young athletes and organisations towards the cost of facilities, equipment and training. The Council set up the fund after wresting £300,000 from Nike for using the borough's logo on a range of sportswear, without permission.

GLL which manages Hackney's leisure centres, awarded all London Youth Games medallists a year's free gym membership. It also sponsored the inclusion award. Plus there was entertainment from dance group Avant Garde, and Cardinal Pole RC School pupil, Rhiann Cunningham, who won this year's Discover Young Hackney talent contest.

Special Constable Len Stevenson is an integral part of Hackney police and has been a voluntary Special Constable for 31 years

By
Felicity Jump

EONARD Stevenson, or Len as his friends call him, knew that volunteering as a 'special' with Hackney police was right up his street, from the moment he stepped out on his first patrol in 1979.

But it's fair to say that joining the Metropolitan Police's Special Constabulary wasn't his intention when he telephoned the force 31 years ago.

Len, who grew up in Hackney and still has family in the borough, laughs as he recalls: "I was working in an office, and wanted something to brighten up the walls. I saw an advert for the 'specials', so I phoned up to ask for some posters. Then I got a call thanking me for my application! At the time, I thought 'how can I get out of this?', but I decided to give it a go, and I've never looked back."

Special Constables volunteer for at least 16 hours a month, and work alongside regular police officers. They wear the same uniform; have the same responsibilities; and enjoy all the variety that policing has to offer.

After more than three decades Len – who now works in facilities support at a law firm – has a host of remarkable stories to tell. He says: "Back in the late 1970s and early 1980s, there weren't many black police officers. In Hackney illegal drinking clubs were springing up, mainly visited by young black men.

"I worked undercover – with plain-clothed police women accompanying me, posing as my 'hangers on' – to look around and spot obstacles or hidden dangers that the police needed to be aware of before raiding the clubs."

Picking his most memorable shift is hard for Len, as there have been so many. But he says: "Patrolling Charles and Diana's wedding in 1981 was probably the most memorable.

"I was working along the Mall, on the procession route to Buckingham Palace, and there were people with cameras everywhere."

And did he see the Royal couple? Len adds: "I was about two metres away from them."

He also chuckles when he remembers falling out of a police van 20 years ago. The driver started the engine thinking Len was safely strapped inside.

He explains: "I went to my mum's house to get cleaned up – she lives just around the corner. She patched up my trousers, then I got back in the van, and back on with the job."

We go on to discuss the work that Len is most proud of. He says: "I was off duty one day, shopping, when I saw a house on fire. I remember asking a neighbour if she knew whether anyone was in the house. She said that she'd seen the children come out, but not the mother."

Len found some members of the public who could keep onlookers calm, and went upstairs to see if anyone was in the house. He located the fire, and went down on all fours to avoid the worst of the smoke.

He recalls: "I saw what looked like a body. I got closer and realised it was a woman. I managed to drag her out, and the Fire Brigade arrived shortly after. They told me that, had I not gone in, she would have died."

Len's work in the community has earned him several commendations, and he is an integral part of Hackney police. He works for around 500 hours each year – well above the hours required, but his employers support him by giving him time off to attend training and other important events.

This year, Len was recognised for his long service at a ceremony at New Scotland Yard last month.

He adds: "If someone were to ask me about joining the specials, then I would say it's not like 'The Bill'! But if you want a challenging, exciting and rewarding opportunity, then volunteering with the police is a great way of putting something back into your community."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: What happens to all the autumn leaves that the street sweepers have been busy clearing?

A: Every autumn and winter around two tonnes of leaves are cleared from Hackney's streets each day. They are taken to the Council's waste transfer station in Millfields Road, Clapton, and emptied into a large container. Once full, it is taken to London Waste's composting facility in Edmonton. The compost is reused on the borough's parks and green spaces. Residents can recycle leaves from their gardens through the Council's Brown Bin collection service or compost them at home by buying a subsidised bin. Residents are being urged to be mindful of their waste from 20 to 28 November – European Week for Waste Reduction.

Hackney produces enough rubbish to fill London Fields seven times each year. All of this rubbish has to be disposed of, which has a huge impact on the environment. By learning how to minimise waste, you can make a big difference to the environment and save money.

During the week, the Council and the North London Waste Authority will be hosting a number of events to help residents to reduce waste and make Hackney greener and cleaner.

Highlights include a demonstration from professional cater Sarah Moore, who will produce delicious meals from left-over food. There is also a baby clothing and maternity wear swapping event, and a food waste roadshow that residents can participate in. See the opposite page for some highlights.

Team bags composting award

THE Council's recycling team has picked up a national industry award for the community composting schemes in the borough.

The recent Local Authority Recycling Advisory Committee (LARAC) Awards saw the team pick up the award for Best Waste Minimisation/Prevention Project. The award is recognition of hard work in the past 12 months developing composting initiatives and setting up small-scale projects on estates across Hackney.

The composting schemes have been successful in diverting organic waste from landfill, and they have also provided residents with compost for their gardens and communal food growing sites.

Commenting on the award, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Waste and Recycling, Lord Henley, said: "I was very impressed with Hackney Council's community composting schemes, and the processes they had in place to reduce waste, which I saw during a recent visit to the borough.

"This is a great example of localism in action, with the local authority supporting and providing guidance for a community that wants to do the right thing in looking after their environment."

Residents planting trees on the Greenway

Greenway get growing

RESIDENTS turned out to help make a cycling and walking route to the 2012 Olympic Park greener.

People from five of the 2012 Host Boroughs joined Olympic Delivery Authority (ODA) contractors to plant over 200 trees and shrubs as part of improvements to the Greenway, which links the Park to Hackney Wick. Willows, jasmine, gorse and Virginia creepers will provide habitats for wildlife, as well as brightening the route. Designed by London-based architects Adams and Sutherland, most of the Greenway regeneration works are now complete, with the 2.3km stretch of green space running from Victoria Park to West Ham Tube station.

A pair of pirates look on as one of their crew takes the plunge from the side of Print House in Dalston

All stories by
Marcel Reinard

A BAND of pirates have abseiled down a Hackney building to raise awareness of a new creative education project.

An 18-strong crew of volunteers put on their eye patches and pulled up their breeches to scale the four-storey listed building, Print House, in Ashwin Street, on 30 October.

The 'Walk The Plank' event raised £3,000 for an initiative that aims to develop literacy skills and creative ability in Dalston pupils. The group behind the abseil, social enterprise Hackney Pirates, said the money will go towards developing a business model and finding a permanent location for an after school programme that gets the local creative community to teach children.

A pilot programme took place during the summer holidays, when art, design and media professionals helped children write stories, publish comic novels, print T-shirts, and create a 'pirate radio' CD.

Catriona Maclay, 27, a former teacher and co-founder of the project, said: "It has been an absolutely brilliant day, just seeing so many volunteers turn up in excellent costumes."

Volunteer, Ellie, added: "Seeing and participating in the growth and ingenuity of each child across the pilot project has been an absolute pleasure."

Hackney Pirates is currently looking for more volunteers to get involved with the project.

Wind of change

BUILDING miniature wind turbines was a step in the right direction for Hackney students at a 'sustainability for schools' workshop.

In total, 90 pupils from City Academy, and Haggerston and Tyssen primary schools got together to challenge the way they think about climate change and how it impacts society.

After listening to the science, students constructed mini turbines; watched short films about the environment; built plastic bottle towers; and talked about sustainability in everyday life. The event took place at Arcola Theatre, E8, on 21 October.

One pupil said: "I really enjoyed creating turbines as it allowed creativity to be in contrast with scientific knowledge. I also liked the fact that we learned what was happening to our climate."

Organised by Arcola Theatre, The Learning Trust and social enterprise

Limina, the project aims to support Hackney secondary schools to get involved with sustainable education.

News in brief

Morningside stars

BUDDING journalists from Morningside Primary School have created a special edition of the Shoreditch Star magazine inspired by the Olympic Park. Developed by Shoreditch Trust, the publication works with Hackney schoolchildren, aged nine to 12-years-old, to engage them in creative writing, reporting, art and design. Previous editions have focused on themes about space, history and the environment. The latest issue – commissioned by the Olympic Delivery Authority and Contemporary Art Society – saw Hackney children working with those from four other 2012 host boroughs. Each of the five schools produced a different section of the publication, based on themes such as materials, memories and monuments to reflect the plans for public art projects in the Olympic Park and the changes taking place across the site. The 40-page magazine has been distributed to schools in the participating boroughs. ### Healthy English lessons

A NEW course is offering advice on healthy living and preparing for work – aimed at Hackney parents whose first language is not English.

As well as help with language skills, the free English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) course for parents gives advice on how health services work as well as information on preparing for the workplace.

Community development charity, Social Action for Health (SAfH), delivered six, nine-week pilot courses over the last year, working with the Refugee Women's Association in Hackney and the Limehouse Project in Tower Hamlets. At the end of the course, SAfH staff provide employment support sessions to help parents write CVs, prepare for interviews and look for jobs. Course participant, Mariam Nessa, is now a sessional worker at SAfH.

She said: "We learned how to make an emergency call; what health services there are; and lots of new words. I can also do things like filling out forms myself, without asking for help."

For more info, call SaFH on 020 7426 5370; or visit: www.safh.org.uk

Win a tactical football board game

BREAK away from traditional board games this festive season with Tactico, a new football game created by fledgling Hackney business MOC Games. Mark O'Callaghan came up with the game while working at Wembley Stadium during its construction. For almost a year he tried out different versions on construction workers, until he felt the balance between strategy and luck was just right. With friend and business partner, James Devlin, he is now selling his finished product. Hackney resident, Mark, said: "Tactico is far from global domination in the board game market, but it shows people that anything is possible if you are willing to give it a go."

So spend your club's money wisely to build a balanced team; defend; go all out on attack; or make your opponents pay millions into your coffers. The tactics you employ decides how the game unfolds. The nearest retailer is currently Leisure Games, Barnet, N3. For more info visit: www.tacticofootball.com MOC Games is giving away three games to Hackney Today readers. For a chance to win, send a postcard to: Tactico comp, Hackney Today, Room 82, Town Hall, Mare Street, E8 1EA; or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 12pm, 26 November. Submissions must include an address and contact number. Winners will be pulled out of a hat.

PREVIEW

The Chaser Years

Until 20 Nov, Maverik Showroom, 68-72 Redchurch St, E2

This Maverik Showroom exhibition showcases some of the legendary musicians that graced celebrated magazine Straight No Chaser.

For nearly 20 years, the Hackney based magazine reported on the jazz and UK music scene that developed after the electronica explosion. It closed in 2007, in part due to the rise of the internet and changes in music news consumption. The Chaser Years zeroes in on photographer Pete Williams; who uses black and white photography predominantly, suggesting that classic jazz club experience.

This powerful collection of images featured the then new-generation of off centre leaders like DJ Shadow, Reprazent, Sizzla, Soweto Kinch, The Roots, Courtney Pine and Cassandra Wilson alongside spiritual jazz legends such as Don Cherry, McCoy Tyner, Yusef Lateef, Steve Reid, Nina Simone, Gilberto Gil and Herbie Hancock (pictured).

Bright Lights, Big City – A Musical

Until 25 November, Hoxton Hall, 130 Hoxton Street, N1

Music, fashion, rhetoric, there's no reason why 1980s literature can't be reheated too. Jay McInerney's Bright Lights, Big City was one of the best yuppie nightlife books from that era: successfully tapping into overblown and vapid excess through the eyes of a frustrated New York novelist, crippled by depression.

Now imagine that as a musical. The response is 'giggle' because you're not sure what to do when 10 people sing and simulate sex a few feet from your face or another croons about dying from a life-threatening disease. It's like having a full body massage and laughing uncontrollably, not because the act itself is funny, but because you don't know what else to do and there isn't a social convention for when a stranger rubs your inner thigh. For one reason, it's a lack of personal space and with such an intimate venue there's a lot to be invaded.

Toe tapping numbers and funky voices from the female contingent do their best to keep this play afloat, even if a lot of the original story and heart is lost in translation. But this is the problem: it's hard to take anything seriously when accompanied by song and dance – maybe the point is you're not supposed to, buy the ticket, enjoy the sleazy subway ride.

In all honesty, whether such bleak literature works on stage accompanied by up-tempo routines is debatable – picture 'Catcher In The Rye' or 'Trainspotting: A Musical'. Actually, that's not such a bad idea. Info: 020 7684 0060; www.hoxtonhall.co.uk

George's Marvellous Medicine

Roald Dahl's classic story George's Marvellous Medicine is coming to the Bloomsbury Theatre's stage this winter.

First published in 1981, the tale follows a young boy who creates a potion to cure his grandmother of her terrifying temper. The concoction, however, produces remarkable results, leading to the start of George's amazing adventures. Clark Devlin takes the title role in this production with Erika Poole as Grandma.

Direction is from Phil Clark, who also led the theatre's last Dahl show, Danny the Champion of the World.

For a chance to win a family ticket, send a postcard to George's Marvellous Medicine competition, Hackney Today, Room 82, Town Hall, Mare Street, E8 1EA; or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 12pm, 26 November. # Music matters

By YH World Reporter

YOUNG PEOPLE from a development organisation working to increase access to quality music opportunities for young Londoners have put their ideas into a comic.

Based at Rich Mix, E1, Sound Connections' youth council, Wired4Music, are a collective of talented young people from across the capital. They are passionate about music and want to communicate their thoughts, ideas and opinions about music in the city.

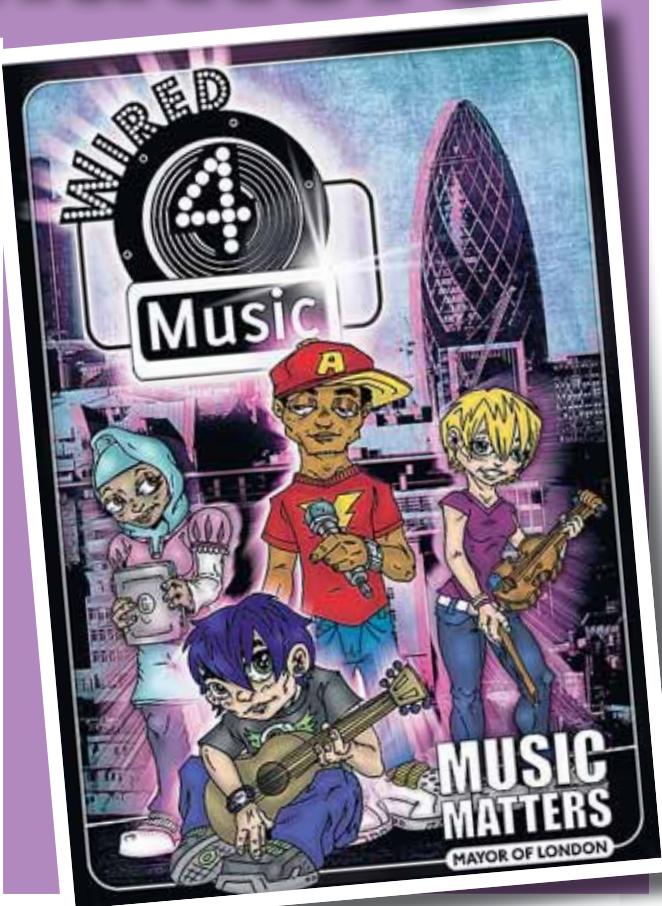

Wired4Music recently met the Mayor of London's Peer Outreach Team, a group of 15 to 25-year-olds who work on behalf of the Mayor for the benefit of young Londoners. At City Hall, they debated the pros and cons of the Mayor's Music Education Strategy.

They then put their ideas together and the comic was designed by artist Nick Toye. It looks at different types of musicians and their needs; and how these could be accommodated by their schools and music teachers.

BBC Asian Networks Bobby Friction has recently become Patron to CM Sounds

A hotspot for your musical education

CM Sounds – the longest-running community music company in the UK – has been spitting out lyrics and hot new music talent for the last 27 years.

Based at Brady Arts Centre, E1, CM Sounds provides creative music making opportunities for people of all backgrounds from the age of 13 upwards.

The project has trained over 1,500 musicians, many of whom have gone on to work in the music industry and in higher and further education. Success stories include Asian Dub Foundation, Courtney Pine and Goldilocks.

All of CM Sounds tutors and leaders are professional musicians or producers who are currently working in the music industry.

There is a wide range of courses on offer, including arts and music leader training; a foundation degree providing industry-standard production skills and business support; and one-to-one support, rehearsal space, recording time and gigging opportunities for young music makers.

No qualifications are needed to join courses, but experience is essential. Youth programmes are usually free.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Three of the volunteers during their day of cleaning at St Leonard's Church in Shoreditch

This quintessence of dusting

HACKNEY young people have been brushing the cobwebs out of a Shoreditch church.

Volunteers from across London, including three from Hackney, turned up to help at St Leonard's Church on 30 October, as part of CSV Make a Difference Day, the UK's single biggest day of volunteering.

The 16 to 25-year-olds washed down the walls of the historic church and hoovered decades of dust from the balcony ledges. Volunteers were also treated to a history lesson and a tour of the crypt, which is the final resting place of some significant figures from Shakespearean theatre – including Richard Burbage, the first actor to play Hamlet.

CSV Project Manager, Rebecca Wilkinson, said: "It's the small things that involve volunteers which can make a real difference. The day gave young people the opportunity to see inside this historic building, and give something back."

For CSV opportunities call: 020 7278 6601; or visit: www.csv.org.uk; to make a difference at historic places of worship call: 020 7278 6601; or visit: www.cathedralcamps.org.uk

has been compiled with help from staff and volunteers at YH World – a social enterprise that produces a website full of info about events, courses, and general happenings in Hackney. They aim to make sure young people don't miss out – and most of the stuff they include is free to take part in. They are always looking for young journalists and undercover reporters. ## Members' Allowances Scheme 2010/11

On 15th September 2010, Hackney Council received a report from its Independent Remuneration Panel on the Council's Members' Allowances Scheme for 2010/11. The main feature of the Independent Remuneration Panel's recommendations was that allowances should be frozen at the same level as 2009/10. The Members' Allowances Scheme for 2010/11 shall take effect from 1st October 2010. All the allowances listed below are subject to income tax and national insurance deductions.

CATEGORY AND ALLOWANCE	POSTS
Basic Allowance, £9,943.50	All Councillors
Band One, £2,222.53	First Opposition Group Whip Second Opposition Group Leader Majority Group Whip Majority Group Chair Majority Group Secretary Deputy Speaker*
Band Two, £14,352.43	First Opposition Group Leader Speaker* Cabinet Adviser Vice Chair of Overview & Scrutiny Board Chairs of Scrutiny Commissions Chair of Regulatory Committee Chair of Audit Sub Committee Chair of Planning Sub-Committee Chair of Licensing Committee

Band Three (B), £38,623.18	Deputy Mayor
Band Four, £75,846.14	Elected Mayor

*The roles of Speaker and Deputy Speaker are not roles that attract a SRA but are covered by a separate legal regime. Schedule 2 of the Local Government Act 1972 provides that a London Borough may pay the Chair of the Council (in Hackney the Speaker) such allowances as the Council thinks reasonable for the purpose of enabling him / her to meet the expenses of his / her office. There is a similar power in respect of the Vice Chair (Deputy Speaker).

** The role of directly Elected Mayor does not attract a SRA. All responsibilities of the role are considered core or basic with there being no additional or special duties.

Copies of the report of the Independent Remuneration Panel and supporting papers are available for inspection from Monday to Friday 9am to 6pm:

Meningitis warning for winter

By Marcel Reinard

RESIDENTS are being reminded to look out for the signs of meningitis this winter – and be wary of flu-like symptoms.

The risk of the potentially fatal disease spreading increases during the colder months, when people are more likely to stay indoors in close contact with family and friends, so germs spread more easily. Immune systems can also be weakened by seasonal colds and flu.

Babies and children under five are most at risk of meningitis, with over half of all cases occurring in this age group. However meningitis can affect anyone at any time.

As a result, the Meningitis Trust has launched an iPhone application, which can be downloaded from the charity's website, which helps identify symptoms. They also run a 24-hour helpline and publish free information leaflets.

Sue Davie, the Trust's Chief Executive, said: "Meningitis can be a difficult disease to spot, particularly at this time of year when many of its early symptoms can be similar to those of flu."

"We urge everyone to familiarise themselves with the symptoms; trust their instincts; and get urgent medical help if concerned."

Warning signs include fever with cold hands and feet, vomiting, headache, stiff neck, dislike of bright light, muscle pain, drowsiness and confusion. There may also be a rash that does not fade under pressure from a glass. Around 2,500 cases of meningitis are reported in the UK annually, with 10 per cent being fatal and 15 per cent of sufferers left

The Meningitis Trust has a 24-hour helpline; (inset) some of the symptoms of the illness with severe after effects such as brain damage, and hearing and sight loss.

The Meningitis Trust also offers free services and a network of community workers to support those affected by the illness.

Healthy step on the way to work

A RETURN-to-work scheme is offering courses to help residents on health-related benefits back into jobs.

Welfare-to-work company Ingeus's free Pathways to Work programmes are run from Hewett Street, EC2. They are designed to help people understand and manage their health conditions in a work environment, and are delivered mainly by in-house health professionals.

Group workshops include interview skills, and coping with pain, and there is additional support from one-to-one advisors.

Bernadette, 37, found employment through the programme. She said: "It has made all the difference being back in work. I feel much more motivated and enjoy having to plan my week with my shifts.

"It has really boosted my confidence to carry through my actions, and to start looking at other things that I need to change in my life."

News in brief

The Ivy Centre's Saturday clinic is proving popular with residents

Ivy Centre's Saturday service

THE Ivy Centre's Saturday drop-in clinic is 'a success with local residents', according to NHS City and Hackney. A survey found 96 per cent of service users rated the clinic as 'good' or 'excellent', and said they would recommend it to others.

Based at St Leonard's Hospital, N1, it offers sexual health testing, free condoms, emergency contraception and advice, pregnancy testing, and health promotion services. The clinic opens each Saturday from 8am to 7.30pm; complementing the long-running weekday service.

The Ivy Centre is run by Clinicenta and NHS City and Hackney. For more info, visit: www.sho-me.nhs.uk

The domino effect

A TEAM of older residents from Hackney and the City won first prize in a dominoes competition at the 2010 Annual Club Wellness Inter-borough Games.

They also came second in the short mat bowls, and third in the indoor bowls, competing against 15 other London boroughs. The team came eighth overall at the games held in Brixton Recreational Centre on 15 October. Dominoes team leader Alberto Fitzgerald, 70, picked up the cup from Greenwich mayor Barbara Barwick. He said: "It was a marvellous day out for the whole team and we enjoyed a thrilling finale in the dominoes competition, which enabled us to take a trophy back to Hackney.

"It was great to meet people from different parts of London and enjoy great comradeship."

Now in its fifth year, the event is organised by social enterprise GLL, which manages 70 leisure centres in London, including Hackney's. The aim was to encourage older people to become more active. For info visit www.gll.org

Enabling better consultations

Florence Obinna, Consultation Officer

FLORENCE is really excited about working in Hackney. She says: "It is diverse demographically and has many different communities, which makes my job more challenging. I need to find innovative methods and activities to reach and listen to everyone in the borough, regardless of how long they have lived here, their level of English or age for example." Her job includes co-ordinating Hackney Matters, a 2,700-strong citizen's panel which is representative of the borough's population.

This panel has fed into the Council's programme of research on issues like climate change, the economic downturn, and health and well-being. One of the most rewarding aspects of her job is advising colleagues who commission surveys. She explains: "We're all very busy, but we aim to make sure the Council does its best to keep people informed of decisions. We also report on how feedback has influenced these decisions in an objective and balanced way."

By Melissa Abache

WHENEVER the Council makes a decision about improving or changing its services or plans, it needs to be confident the decision is properly informed by local public opinion.

Preserving the reserve

By Sally England,
Local Studies Librarian

A LOOK at the 1870 Ordnance Survey map of the area between East Reservoir, in Stoke Newington, and Stamford Hill shows that much of the land was then still undeveloped.

Farmland ran up to the gardens of elegant villas and mansions in Stamford Hill, many with their own large ponds. But things were about to change.

Just two years later the Great Eastern Railway branch line from Liverpool Street to Enfield cut a swathe through the rural peace and quiet, with new stations at Stamford Hill and Stoke Newington.

By 1894, not only had the pleasant gardens gone, but most of the villas too, with the few that did survive being transformed into tenements and workplaces.

New roads had been laid out and the fields, gardens, and ponds, were swallowed up by a still-spreading residential suburb.

Today, the bricks and mortar and tarmac of Stamford Hill appear to have totally overwhelmed any traces of wilderness and wildlife. But along the sides of the railway that originally brought so much change to the area, one of Hackney's hidden nature reserves can be found.

The East and West Bank Nature Reserve takes its name from the two roads flanking the railway between Dunsmure Road and Stamford Hill rail station in Amhurst Park, and consists of two 2,000 metre-long strips of woodland separated by the Holmleigh Cutting. The tops of the banks are owned by the Council, and the slopes by Network Rail. Parts of the reserve have been designated a Site of Importance for Nature Conservation (SINC).

Despite its small size, the reserve contains between five and 10 per cent of Hackney's mature woodland, including hybrid black poplar, ash, and wild cherry.

The reserve is also important because of the presence of the plant Good King Henry – once a common vegetable used like asparagus and spinach, but now an endangered species. Bird life includes great spotted woodpeckers, jays, song thrushes and house sparrows.

In 2002, residents formed the East and West Bank Nature Reserve

Group to help the Council and Network Rail with the management of the reserve.

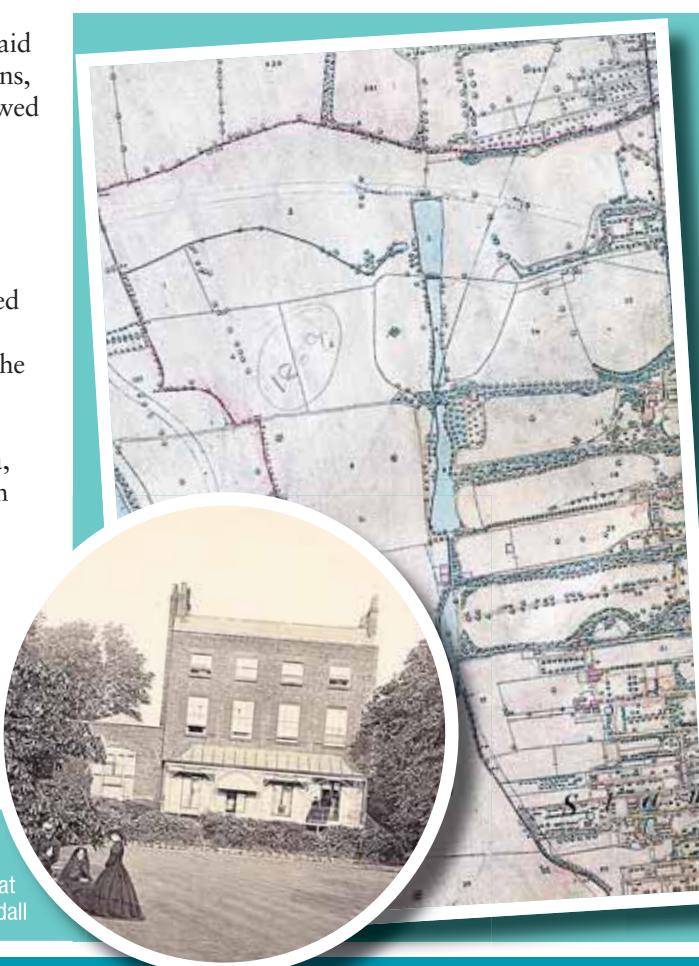

Volunteers clear away litter and invasive plants, and plant native trees, shrubs and flowers to increase biodiversity and provide good sources of food for insects, birds and small mammals. The group meets on the first Sunday of every month – except next month when they meet on 12 December – to carry out jobs such as planting, pruning and fence mending.

- To get involved, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/east-and-west-bank-nature-reserve, or just turn up at the next event, at 10am, on the corner of West Bank and Dunsmure Road.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

The Mayor

Jules Pipe

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of the Council who is elected annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sally Mulready.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse
www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.

Turnips, swedes, carrots, parsnips and beetroots are cheap and plentiful at the moment. Try visiting a local market for some really fine specimens.

Chef James Blonde cooks up a seasonal treat that allows these humble roots to take centre stage on the dinner table.

He says: "Derived from the traditional French galette, this recipe uses a variety of root vegetables to create a layered effect, with beetroot slices giving particular visual appeal. It's a way of presenting autumn vegetables so that they will appeal to everyone."

Chef Blonde's Rootcake

Serves 8
Ingredients

- One swede
- One large turnip
- 500g carrots
- 500g parsnips
- Four banana shallots
- Four garlic cloves
- Two fresh raw beetroots
- Bunch of thyme, chopped
- Bunch of rosemary, chopped
- Three eggs
- 500ml cream

Preparation time
1 hour

Cooking time
50 minutes

- Chop garlic and shallots finely and add herbs then fry over a medium flame until soft
- In a buttered springform cake tin that won't leak use the veg to build up different layers. Use big swede slices first to hold the base and reserve some for the top. About half way up the tin, lay fried shallots and herbs. Above this use the beetroots and then top with the reserved swede
- Whisk together cream and eggs and pour over veg. Cover the top with a layer of baking paper to prevent scorching and bake at 140°C for 40 minutes. Remove paper and turn up to 160°C for 10 minutes

Method

- Cut veg into 1mm slices with a knife or mandolin – watch your fingers – and par boil until friable but not mushy

Waterhouse is a social enterprise that trains local people in the ethos of eco-friendly best practice in the restaurant industry.

Owned by Shoreditch Trust, its profits go back into a regeneration programme for the local area.

Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is open

To serve

- Serve with a few deep fried parsnip crisps for contrasting texture for breakfast and lunch every day from 9am; and for dinner from Weds to Sat evenings. Now taking Christmas bookings.

Let's talk about sex

THERE'S still time to have a say on 'sex establishments' in Hackney.

The Council's licensing committee is inviting residents to help shape the borough's town centres by taking part in a public consultation looking at the way sex establishments are licensed.

The committee is responsible for regulating sex shops, sex cinemas and sex entertainment venues, such as lap dancing clubs and erotic dancing venues. It has drafted a new policy to determine whether and how to grant sex establishment licences in Hackney.

A 'nil' policy is being proposed, which would mean that no licences would normally be granted to sex establishments in Hackney, and the Council wants to know whether local people think this is appropriate. Hackney currently has one licensed sex shop and four premises that are 'licensed to provide live performances or displays of nudity solely or mainly to sexually stimulate audience members'. The licensing committee wants to hear from all residents and is particularly keen to find out the views and experiences of those who live, work, or run a business near to an existing licensed sex establishment. These views will help the committee determine a policy based on local knowledge.

If introduced, the new Sex Establishment Licensing Policy would guide the committee when considering applications by balancing the conflicting needs of commercial interests, customers, employees, residents and communities.

The consultation runs until 13 December. To take part visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/licensing
